SLIGHT PROBLEM

A preacher moved to a new congregation, but soon discovered that something about the water at his new residence disagreed with him. After several bouts with an intestinal disorder, the church decided to invest in a water filtering and softening system for the residence. When the abbreviated copy of the minutes of the business meeting were distributed to the Congregation. They caused quite a few raised eyebrows: "It was moved, seconded and unanimously approved that the Elders would take care of the preacher's drinking problem."

Another Miracle Malfunction Ends In Tragedy

The Muslim religion has many sects or denominations. You've heard of Sunni and Shia – the two most well-known sects. Another is the mystical Sufis, a branch of Islam steeped in charismatic "miracles." Recently, one such miracle went awry. Muhammed Sabir, a Pakistani pir (Muslim "holy" man [sounds like "pier," as in taking a long walk on a sort pir]) had gained popularity for his ability to perform "miracles." But in his quest to impress, he went too far by claiming he could raise the dead. And what better way to confirm the word (Mark 16:20) than with a demonstration. But pir Sabir had conditions. He didn't go to the cemetery and resurrect someone good and dead. He needed a fresh body, preferably a married man with children. Perhaps the will to live would be stronger than in great-granddad long in the grave. Muhammed Niaz, a trusting father of six children volunteered. Niaz was placed on a table in the town square, legs and hands bound. The "holy" man sliced the victim's throat as the people watched. Niaz bled out, and Sabir whispered words to bring his life back.

As the crowd realized the miracle the miracle wasn't working, Sabir tried to flee. The villagers detained him for the police, and he was arrested. Niaz's sister still had faith in the pretending pir, saying her brother "will be rewarded for his services for the spiritual leader in the afterlife." She added that Sabir shouldn't be arrested since her brother volunteered.

This account can be found online at Tribune.com.pk. I submit a passage that would surely speak to such foolishness, II Thessalonians 2:11 "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie:"

2018 Valentine's Dinner – Marriage Advice

We asked our dinner attendees what marriage advice they would offer to young married couples. What follows is the best we could get.

Marriage (successful marriage) is a two way street. I want it my way all of the time – is a good way to have a miserable marriage.
(Robert Turner)

Always be respectful toward each other. (Kerry & Gail Hollis)

Be a good listener. (Nancy Herron)

Read the Five Love Languages by Dr. Gary Chapman.
(Jim & Janis Dearman)

Communicate. (George Harvey)

Always remember to be true to one another. (Charline Johnson)

Stay in God's word; it will strengthen you through hard times.
(Sue Dixon)

Always keep a sense of humor. It will get you through a lot of things.
(Benny & Linda McCoy)

Just keep on loving each other no matter what. (Rubel Clayton)

Have Christ first in your life. (Rachel Hixson)

No marriage can have two bosses…however, all marriages must have two partners. (John Cooley)

Listen to each other's feelings and ideas. (Tina Hickman)

Always love each other, help each other in all things, and support each other in the dreams you have. (Tim Layman)

If you fight, do it fairly. (Freddie Clayton)

No marriage is perfect. You need to always work together and respect each other. (Trish Boston)

What Trish said. (Tony Boston)

Put God first and be a Christian example for your children. (Wanda Hennessee)

Make up quickly. Don't try to sleep on it. (Rickey Hickman)

Be a help meet to each other. (Ann Cooley)

Always help each other out with everything. (Tammy Layman)

Be forgiving. (Tammy Clayton)

Marriage is not a word. It's a sentence....a LIFE sentence. (Wilma Mabry)

Don't go to bed mad. Stay up and fight all night! (Dan Mabry)

Thank you to these and to all who encourage us with your faithfulness to God and your marriage.
