Questionnaire For Psychiatrists

OR

There Goes That Preacher Again

A few years ago a questionnaire regarding swim-wear was sent by the Hollywood Social Studies organization to a sampling of United States psychiatrists to ascertain whether there are risks in sexual display of fashionable swim-wear of today. Of those who replied, 87% said a parent would be "realistic" to be aware that a swimsuit with high-cut legs might make a daughter a target for sexual advances or crimes; 84% said a parent would be naive to think that a daughter would wear a string bikini and not appear to boys to invite sexual attention; 81% said the same is true of females who wear bikinis or short skirts; 91% said that husbands and fathers have some responsibility for sensible guidance to enable females to avoid clothing that might be dangerously provocative to some males, and most of the psychiatrists polled said that some mothers who dress their little girls in unnecessarily revealing swimsuits may be expressing their own exhibitionism indirectly, and that if the fact is brought to their attention, 96% said that a likely response would be self-righteous indignation, accusing anyone of vile motives who would dare think such a thing. So, do you still think that warnings about immodesty is only so much preacher talk?

CHECK YOUR READING BOOK FOR THIS!

"It should be a general rule never to utter anything in conversation which would justly dishonor us if it should be reported to the world"

"The first years of man must make provisions for the last. He that never thinks can never be wise."

"We should have some employment for our mind as well as for our hands and feet. We must not let our thoughts run to waste, any more than our time."

"Never leave that to be done the next hour which may properly be done now, nor dare to put off till tomorrow the business which you may as well begin today."

"Whatsoever we shall wish we had done when grief and sickness, loss and disappointment, old age and death come upon us, that we ought to do in every part of life."
