Who Was Philetus?

It is amazing, yet true, that if the Holy Spirit had consulted with some of our brethren today and had followed their advice and wishes, we would have no idea as to whom Philetus was.

Philetus was a member of the Lord's church in the first century who, along with another brother by the name of Hymenaeus, was propagating the error that the resurrection had already taken place, and, by this error, was overthrowing the faith of some (II Timothy 2:17,18). Would you think that subverting or overturning a brother or sister's faith would constitute a serious matter? In this same connection Paul says that the words of these two men was "eating like a canker." One translation says "their word as a gangrene will have pasture." If that figure does not accurately express the harm caused and need to expose, what would?

If the Holy Spirit through Paul had used the "don't call names" approach that we often hear suggested, how many other unsuspecting brethren would have had their faith overthrown and been lost because of this error? What if the Holy Spirit had said, "There is some false doctrine that is being taught about the resurrection, and some brethren are experiencing the overthrow of their faith because of it, but we will just leave it at that because calling names would be just too personal and controversial?"

Where do those who contend for such get the idea? When brethren are being influenced by those who are intent on subtracting from the truth (I John 1:6-10) or in adding to the truth (Galatians 1:6-9; 5:7), such perverted gospels and the promoters thereof must be exposed. When error and the proponents of such are publicly named, we are simply doing what the Scriptures instruct us to do by command (Romans 16:17; Titus 3:9-11) and by example (I Timothy 1:19,20; II Timothy 2:17,18; III John 9-11). No apology for doing so is needed.

-Freddie
