Another Fool For The Fire

In the old American West, a young man was charged with robbing a bank, stealing a horse, and shooting two people as he made his get-away. After many weeks of hiding in the hill country, the young man was captured and brought to jail to await his trial.

While in jail, that young man was visited by a stranger that told him he was hired by his father to fix the situation. He told him that he had arranged a deal with the sheriff, the hangman, and the undertaker to make his death look convincing.

The rope would be long enough for him to reach a wagon full of straw hidden just beneath the platform. Then the undertaker would load him in a coffin and carry him out of town and release him. A horse would be waiting with a thousand dollars in the saddle bag and he could ride away guilt-free.

Armed with that information, the young man was disrespectful during the trial and when the judge sentenced him to death by hanging, the young man laughed. As he placed his head in the hangman's noose, the young man glanced at the stranger, who gave a nod of assurance. "Tis in," he thought.

Seconds after the trapdoor opened, the young man's neck was broken. The undertaker placed his body in a coffin and drove him out of town to a public cemetery. On the grave, someone raised a wooden sign that said, "Another fool for the fire."

Friend, who are you listening to? Do you suppose that you can live your life in opposition to God and still have eternal life with Him? Only a fool would live on such a promise.

"And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: (27) And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it," (Matthew 7:26-27)
