A lot more people would try to do right if they thought it was wrong.

Some people get an awful lot of pleasure just by being shocked by other people's sins.

The only good thing about some people is their opinion of themselves.

CHRIST, OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS

QUESTION:

"How was Christ made 'righteousness' for us (1 Corinthians 1:30)?"

ANSWER:

The verse, alluded to in this query, 1 Corinthians 1:30, reads in full as follows: "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who was made unto us wisdom from God, and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption." He is the means of righteousness, that is, it is through him we are enabled to receive the blessings of righteousness—the blessings which come to us through a life of righteousness. It is in this sense that we receive "the gift of righteousness," not righteousness itself, but that which righteousness bestows. Righteousness is right-doing—the keeping of God's commandments (Psa. 119:172). Neither here, nor elsewhere, in the sacred writings, is the denominational doctrine (lately espoused by some brethren) of imputed (transferred) righteousness taught. One might as well argue, from 1 Corinthians 1:30, that the wisdom of Christ is transmitted to the sinner in conversion, as to argue for a transference of righteousness (Rom. 5:17). The "gift of righteousness" is salvation.

The blessings of righteousness are received through faithful compliance with the will of the Lord and through obedience to His commandments, and not through some mysterious bestowal of merit which the Lord possesses. We must remember that justification does not obliterate the history of sin in life: it simply releases the sinner from the guilt thereof. Paul, ever mindful of the great grace he had experienced, was never without the consciousness that he had persecuted the church of God and wasted it (1 Tim. 1:12-17). Pardon, saved, justified, acquitted, no longer under the guilt of sin, it remained for him, through faithful adherence to the Lord's will, to exhibit personal righteousness, right-standing, with God. So it is with us. The blessing of salvation is through Christ. He is the means of righteousness (1 Cor. 1:30), through Him we receive "the gift of righteousness" (Rom. 5:17), we are accepted by Him when we work "righteousness" (Acts 10:34, 35) through unswerving allegiance to His will as set out in the New Testament. We must distinguish between a righteousness imputed (credited) to us because we are in a right relationship with God through obedience to His will, and a righteousness which Christ (through his submission to the will of the Father), is alleged to have transferred to us. The former, the New Testament clearly teaches; the latter is Calvinism.

There is a vast difference between imputing guilt and in conferring merit. A pardoned criminal is no longer regarded as guilty of the crimes which led to his arrest and conviction, but he is thence by no means a valuable citizen simply because he has been pardoned! Righteousness is right-doing. To be righteous, one must do right. We do right when we keep the commandments of the Lord.
